Wisconsin Association for Food Protection: Fall Workshop Held Virtually

The Wisconsin Association for Food Protection (WAFP) held its Fall 2020 Virtual Workshop on November 12. The workshop was held using GoToWebinar, which the Food Research Institute (FRI) of the University of Wisconsin (UW) – Madison graciously allowed for use. Despite a few minor glitches with technology, the three-hour free conference received positive accolades and had 88 attendees.

The meeting kicked off with an introduction from Affiliate President Jean Finger, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture Trade and Consumer Protection (DATCP), who thanked everyone for adjusting to the new format and for a terrific year. The first speaker, Adam Borger, University of Wisconsin – Madison, provided an enter-taining take on accelerated shelf-life studies, the pitfalls, and perks. Next, Dr. Steve Ricke, newly-appointed Director of the UW Meat Science and Ani-mal Biologics Discovery (MSABD) Pro-gram, provided an overview of the pro-gram and new building. Kevin Miller, Kwik Trip, followed with a detailed overview of the company’s microbiological environmental monitoring program and controls used to prevent contamination. His presentation brought insight into the daily program as well as special situation modifications to the program. Dr. Steve Ingham, DATCP, discussed his annual – and highly anticipated – overview of the State of Wisconsin’s current food safety situation. His presentation is always a highlight of our meeting and once again, he did not disappoint!

The program concluded with a presentation from Sharon Lindan Mayl, U.S. FDA, who spoke on the current state of the FDA initiative of Smarter Food Safety. The presentation provided an update on the initiative and insight into the future blue-print and was a welcome addition to the conference.

Overall, the virtual event proved a success and provided excellent information to the WAFP membership.

A virtual Spring Workshop in June 2021 is currently in the planning process, with hopes the Affiliate’s Fall 2021 Workshop can be held in person, depending on the situation of the pandemic by then.
